Much research supports the devastating academic, mental health, and negative developmental effects that can result from Youth Use of Alcohol and Marijuana, Vaping Nicotine and THC, and the Use of Other Drugs.

Research indicates that children and teens are much less likely to use Alcohol, Marijuana, and other drugs if their parents talk frequently with them about the dangers of such use.

Research also indicates that most youth say their parents rarely, if ever, talk to them about the dangers of using of alcohol, marijuana, vape products, and other drugs.

TALK WITH YOUR CHILDREN/TEENS OFTEN ABOUT THE DANGERS OF USING ALCOHOL, MARIJUANA, VAPES, AND OTHER DRUGS

TALK OFTEN! TALK EARLY! THEY DO LISTEN!

Ask: How long do you think it will take for your brain to fully develop?
Listen.

Inform: Your brain doesn't stop developing until you are 25 years or older.

Ask: What do you know about the effects of drinking, vaping, and the use of marijuana on your brain?
Listen.

Inform: The use of alcohol, marijuana, vaping and other drug use can affect your ability to learn, do well in school, make good decisions, and can cause addiction. Tell them that you want to help them stay safe - that you don't want them to use and there will be consequences if they do so.

- Take advantage of TEACHABLE MOMENTS – Passing billboards advertising marijuana, observing others vaping or smoking in the community, watching television shows and movies that show drinking, smoking and other drug use, listening to music that talks about drug use, etc.
- Use those opportunities to talk with your child/teen. Small talks over time can be more effective than one long conversation.
- Spend time with your child/teen learning more by visiting any of these websites together:
